Peace

by Bernard Newman

The battlefields are quiet.
From the sky again the sunshine falls, not the bombs
The rolling surf, the snow white caps,
Where men have died before.
Each grain of sand, each square of waters edge,
What stories they could tell,
Of blood and death that reeked of Satan's Hell.
But now the fields are quiet, the rolling surf is light,
And up above, the sun shines bright.

A Dedication

by Jeanette Mishanie
Albert Marshak

With the advent of the atomic age, when the complete obliteration of all humanity in a single war may become a reality, we can no longer afford to remain indifferent to our international relations in the social, political, and economic fields.

The United Nations is the only tangible instrument we have to bring about world peace. It is the only hope of civilization; it is the only hope of mankind. Ours is the job of encouraging it, of strengthening it, until it becomes a structure wherein the peoples of the world have successfully joined together, and maintained peace and security.

During this, our last term at Lafayette, the United Nations has assembled here in New York, at Hunter College. We are proud that the world has chosen our city as the meeting place of the new peace organization. The U.N. must receive our support, our trust, our cooperation. We must endeavor, in our own way to do whatever is possible to aid it along the hard road to peace. We dedicate this issue of the Legend, to the success of the United Nations.

To the Class of June 1946:

This book will, in the years to come, serve to remind you of the happy years you have spent here at Lafayette, years of growing friendships, of united efforts in so many patriotic endeavors.

May you take with you to the tasks of peace the same unselfish spirit that you have shown. May you continue to realize and appreciate the blessings that are yours in a democracy. May you be ever true to its ideals and leaders in the endeavor to maintain them in city, state, and nation.

May you remain united as a class, returning often to the school. May the years bring you ever deeper friendships, peace, prosperity, and security.

Your principal,

FRED'K WM. OSWALD

To the Seniors:

The world you face as you leave high school is a world at peace—but it is an uneasy peace. A heavy responsibility rests upon you and upon all the youth of America. I hope that at Lafayette you have learned to think clearly, and to discern surely the line between truth and falsehood, so that you will not be misled by the chants of the demagogues, who in these days blind so many through their appeals to emotion and selfish interest.

May you be firm in a determination to act with good will and intelligence at all times. Do not be quick to criticize others but be watchful of yourselves!

It is only as we show ourselves worthy of our American democratic heritage that we make our contribution toward lasting peace.

Your grade adviser,

KATHARINE HART

As we depart from Lafayette today, we are confronted with a world which has felt the bitter sting of war, a world which has known the terror of the Four Horsemen, a world which looks to the olive branch with eager anticipation.

Victory has been attained after a long and bloody war. The lives of many of our friends and relatives have been lost. It was not a simple task; it was not easily accomplished. The cost was immeasurable.

We have spent these years of war, here at Lafayette High School, a place far from falling bombs, and sinking ships. It is here that we have molded our characters, our thoughts, our ideals. During these years, our grade adviser and our teachers have shown us kindness and consideration in helping to solve our problems. We would like to express our appreciation to all of them.

As we leave, we carry with us fond memories of the first day in the school, of the crowded halls, of the busy cafeteria, of the football games, of the Varsity Shows, of the dances, and of Senior Day. All these represent a time in our lives, when we combined pleasure with learning. They symbolize a period during which we gained friends, and learned to work and play together.

For many of us, the future is uncertain; for others, a definite career has been decided upon. Some of us will go to college; others will strive to succeed at various vocations. Only a few of us will reach the zenith of our ambitions.

Notwithstanding these facts we should all endeavor to gain more knowledge wherever our paths may lead. Knowledge can be as endless and as varied as life itself. Thoughts can be as many-colored, and as swift-changing as the sunset. With each day it is possible for us to gain more wisdom. By employing this wisdom in all our actions, and in discerning the right from the wrong, we can lead fuller and happier lives. May we use it to maintain justice and world peace in the forthcoming years. The world of tomorrow is in our hands.

Your Class Mates

By Melvin Goldberg

Have you ever observed the students sitting about you in your history or English class? They're people like you, but what have they got that is so different? During my four long (and often tiresome) years in high school, I have made an extensive search on the ways and means of our Lafayette civilians. You ought to recognize them. First of all we have:

THE WHIZZ

He's the one who usually has his hand up all the time; if somebody put a match in it, he'd look like the Statue of Liberty. With a smile across his face that signifies superior intelligence (to him, at least) he gets up from his chair in a deliberate manner and relates his thesis on the causes of the American intervention in Cuba in 1911 when the teacher asks for the President of Mexico in 1888. The day that he has laryngitis, he considers it a catastrophe, although the rest of the class considers it a pleasure. On tests he's always busy writing and it's safe to give odds that even he doesn't know what he's writing. Extra reports go hand in hand with home work. Sooner or later half the class will be despising him. But, what does he care; he gets the results when the marks come on the report card.

Well, next we have:

THE HECKLER

Contrary to the Whizz, his hands are never up to answer a question for the teacher; he gets a special pleasure out of interrupting others. Whenever his mind functions (which is very rarely), and an idea stealthly creeps forward, he blurts it out and disturbs the class. He's usually the class wisecracker (very crummy) who, when the English teacher asks for a word with the prefix "poly", yells out, "Polly wants a cracker." He's constantly conversing with his neighbor about the N.Y.U.-St. John's game in the Garden last night, and when the teacher puts down a ZIP for him, he defiantly states that he was just telling his neighbor about the subject on hand. He's always the first to laugh at practically nothing and the teacher has quite a time making out his mark; she doesn't know whether to give him 45% or 50%.

What? You know him? I thought you would, but here's somebody you ought to know just by the name. She's

THE GLAMOUR GAL

With compact in one hand and powder puff in the other, she's always "fixing herself up". Whether it's during a test or in the middle of a serious lecture, she's always in there, smearing herself up as if she were going to pose for one of those modernistic paintings. A typical period with her starts when she comes in from the halls, exhausted from the tiring job of walking up one flight of stairs, and flops down into her desk. But we shouldn't really call it a desk because immediately after, it is converted into a dressing table. Her bulging purse, which resembles a small sack of potatoes, is then emptied. Let's see now: handkerchiefs, wallets, change purse, compact, make-up-kit, comb, mirror, cigarettes, matches, letters, a small pad, keys, bottle of ink, picture album, extra stockings, today's lunch, and oh! yes! can't forget our school utensils—a chewed up pencil.

"Oh! I look like a mess!" is her usual exclamation as she gets down to her job of reconversion. First it's her hair that gets the works as she pulls out hair-pins and piles them up in neat bundles of twenty each. Then the electricity and the loose hairs start flying out as she brushes and combs her lovely flaxen tresses. After it is combed and reassembled, she goes to work with the powder puff and the lipstick.

Thus three-quarters of the period for her is spent, making herself more alluring to the boys, who, in spite of all her preparation, walk around in sweat shirts and creaseless pants. Ah! me. You won't forget her, will you?

This next one is very common; he's

THE HOMEWORK MONGREL

Never having any time to do his work at home, he decides to do his homework and copying in school, during all periods. Algebra is done in English, English in History, History in Spanish, etc. It's a regular schedule. There are two main types of mongrels; first there is the common one who does his homework and doesn't care what's going on in class—thus receiving zeros by the score; and then there's the intelligent one who knows what's up and often leaves 3X3—4X2—7—0 to answer—Wo wurde die erste deutsche Republic gegrunde? We marvel at him.

The best spot for doing the homework is in the cafeteria where expert advice may be obtained—between an egg sandwich and a cream puff—although doing homework while walking in the halls is not uncommon. The funniest sight in the school is to notice a mongrel walking down a crowded corridor talking to himself as he has to rehearse, "Tomorrow and tomorrow, and tomorrow. . . ."

Ha! Ha! You were one of them, huh? But here is one whom all of us know:

THE ARTIST DIVINE

Pen, pencil, chalk, knife, or key—it doesn't make any difference to him what he uses as long as his desk is decorated. The commonest type is the one that writes or carves his name on the wood, just to make sure that nobody else gets that chair, or maybe because he wants publicity. Club names are very common, and more than once will the name of the "Jaguars" (or such) appear on a desk, in black ink outlined with white chalk. The designer enjoys making sweeping curves or darting arrows on his desk. The gravestone type is also very well known. He's the guy that can hardly wait until the period is over, and will write or cut out on a drawn-in diagram of a tombstone, "Here lies the one who died waiting for the bell to ring." A girl is usually the one who starts a desk correspondence, beginning with, "What's your name?" and terminating when she runs out of desk space.

But the desk isn't the only recipient of these fanciful ideas; the looseleaf book ronks high among the line of ersatz canvas. The most common writing on a looseleaf book are the names of people, often connected by the word "loves," (i.e. Lucky Loves Fischler, etc.). Can you imagine if she broke off with that fellow? Why she'd have to throw away the book. But does all this mutilation of desks and books worry the BORED of Education? Of course not!

Last of all we have:

THE MAN WHO WASN'T THERE

From the title, you can guess that this character is one of Mr. Tholfsen's shadows. He's never in class. On the rare occasion when he honors us with a visit, a recess is given by the teacher, so that she and our visitor can straighten out his alleged absences. If he's lucky enough to be friends with the attendance monitor, and the teacher is somewhat nearsighted, well, he has another lunch period to his credit. Don't think that we mind his being absent; it's only when he comes back that we get grumpy, as we have to take our coats off his chair and put them in the closet.

So ends our actual high school days, but not in spirit, for we always will remember "that character" that sat next to us, or that "gorgeous hunk of blonde" that was in front of us in English or "that genius" who provided us with the answers in history, but most of all, those teachers; we loved them all. (I'm writing the story, not you).

SPORTS

Boys In Sports

By Henry Stern

Well, we the class of June '46 are finally leaving. Thinking back on the past years we find, a little surprised, how important they were for Lafayette's sports.

Whether you know it or not, in the three years during which the majority of us have tramped these halls our teams won their first football game, took two division and two city soccer championships, organized a handball squad and formed a rifle team.

During this time we have also played good baseball, passing basketball and fighting football.

Well, that's about all that will be seen on the records, but to us graduating frenchies it's the memories of happy victories and sportmanlike defeats that will stay with us. It's the thrill of watching Artie Pinto clicking behind a team and coming out with a long gain that we'll remember. It's the sharp picture of the Lincoln games, always packed, always tough that we'll never forget.

And for those few of us who were down at soccer games, a clear mind picture will always remain of the old leather dropping past an opponent's goalie for an exhibition tile of—the championships. Only a very few of us will remember the magnificent games played away from home—the Jefferson game in '45, the Boys' High game in which fighting goalie Mauceri played on, though injured.

Yes, that's what we take with us, and going back a little farther we come upon the pounding, vibrant feeling of sitting in Lafayette's gym while Red Murphy galloped across the boards; or the time Jerry Remer won a game with two foul shots in "sudden death."

But, it's not a clear memory that we'll bring away. It's a happy, thrilling, exciting, cheering, watching, chewing, stamping, hoping, cursing, whistling, atmosphere that we all felt whenever, in any sport, Lafayette's teams played, and Lafayette was spectator.

If some of you think that a sport has been omitted, then you don't know the purpose of this page. It's not to give you records and figures, but it's something that in later years you may look at and let your mind begin recalling your own memories of Lafayette, not mine, your own recollection of a time in your life when the team wasn't professional but meant more because of the people who were playing it for you and watching it with you than any other athletic contest could.

We, the class of June '46 are leaving Lafayette and going out into a tough world. Maybe sometimes these memories of hard contests and good losers will help you take your job in the world.

Girls In Sports

By Shirley Sutton
Leonora Sharpe

Lafayette calling! Lafayette calling! Calling all Legend readers! Coming in for a four-year landing.

Four years of attending gym twice weekly for ninety minute periods has given everyone those familiar bulging muscles and all that vim and vigor. But four years of gym has had some advantages and hasn't been all cholly horses.

The most dreaded though was rising at seven-thirty, dressing seven-forty-five, and then udressing at eight-forty-five to do setting-up exercises to "Caledonia, What Makes Your Big Head So Hard?" It's too early in the morning to sit down, stand up, arms out, forward march, about face!

Remember your first program card? It said, "H. Ed., 11 A, Room, Gym." And like all freshmen, you asked the first senior you came across where the Girls' Gym was and ended up in the basement locker room. This was your official initiation into Lafayette and after that you religiously practiced the same routine on all subsequent freshmen.

Well, finally you get to the gym and you're astounded because you've never seen anything so enormous. You're accustomed to doing your gymnastics in a room about the size of a log cabin. This is going to be fun! You're all set, broken in properly, and the teacher comes along and says, "Play ball." She produces a net and a nice white ball. The idea is to get the ball ball over the net. But between serves, you are taught the Rhumba, Lindy, Samba, and the Virginia Reel.

Many a time you wonder if four years of gym activity at Lafayette has offered any benefits. The teacher tells you the exercises produce stamina, coordination, and endurance to the human body, and the play periods give every student the opportunity to partake in sports and also to be a good official, something which calls for quick decisions and sportsmanship. I think the girls are inclined to agree with the teacher.

In our sophmore year we learned a new game. We are always progressing, you see. This game is basketball. The main idea is to get the ball through the basket that's five feet over your head. Then you try your hand with a bat in softball and find that you're better off when you're playing first base. Of course, every day you sit down, get up, forward march, about face and do those good old break-your-back-or-bust exercises. By this time, you've broken in more muscles than Atlas knows how to show.

And now you're a joyous graduate with just a happy-go-lucky thought: you'll be doing all of this again in college. Whenever you dust off the the maroon cover of this Legend, don't forget to look in and sit down, get up, forward march, and about face.

18 Months At the Lafayette Gates or Where's Yer Pass, Sister?

By Charles Binder

So I was on the Service Squad! So what? So this: I got pushed around by big fellows, teachers, and captains; I pushed around little fellows, sergeants, and privates (I was a lieutenant); I sent people who were late around to the side entrance. I sent people without passes, who came up to the main entrance, out into the bitter cold. I slammed doors in freshies' faces. I greeted the teachers when they arrived. I used to freeze, holding doors open for our faculty.

For what? For just 80 credits a term . . . and lessons learned in the school of experience.

The funniest thing about the front door post, is the large variety for excuses that the students present in order to get into school early. To get out of the cold or heat, they suddenly become members of the swing band, orchestra, dramatic club, speaker's bureau, football team, and stage squad. Urgent phone calls have to be made. Students have to go to the emergency room. Some give me a different story each morning, never following in line with what they said the previous day. If I were to believe some of them, several fellows would probably receive enough service credits for a class of forty pupils, working 8 periods a day, 5 days a week.

Some of the feminine gate crashers tried to get through by flashing smiles and by using their feminine wiles. Nevertheless, I was always able to resist their charm, and turn them away from our doors. I was a social outcast. As I walked through the halls, and felt their stares, I felt so low that I had to look up to see bottom; so low that I had no trouble tickling an ant's foot; so low that I could crawl under a worm without difficulty.

Sweat and tears, joy and sorrow, happiness and dismay have passed by me and my lurid eyes at my memorable post, and now into the world beyond maybe I'll see them again. But never the sight of these gate crashing football players or those pleading tear-jerkers or those energetic, enigmatic, everlasting teachers. Long may they all live and the Service Squad also.

Our Favorites

Each term for approximately three or four years we have listened to, criticized, laughed at, spoken to, hated and loved (?,?) our teachers. Finally, in the eighth term we are given our revenge (heh, heh), we vote for our favorites. Why they were picked, we don't know; maybe out of sympathy or from fond memories, or because we were bribed . . . well anyway what have they got to say for themselves?

Mr. Nathan Blumenthal:

Was educated at N.Y.U., Fordham, and Brooklyn Poly Tech . . . teaching is a family affair . . . likes woodworking and farming . . . believes goodwill and fellowship exist among the student body at Lafayette . . . advice to seniors: "It is up to the graduate as future citizens to correct the injustices in the world and do their utmost to promote adequate educational opportunities for future senior classes."

Mr. Herbert Weisberg:

He became a teacher by accident . . . works with youth organizations . . . believes Lafayette students are human beings, worse than that he cannot say . . . advice to seniors: "One with truth is stronger than all the battalions" . . . never aggravates himself . . . likes to go home—to whom? . . . a pretty red-headed wife with green eyes and two lovely children . . . wouldn't you?

Mr. Alvin Broido:

A slow lecturing voice and a "Join the G.O." will always introduce that famous economics teacher and student school companion . . . Mr. A. Broido . . . he teaches to direct students in their proper paths and instruct them how to make their lives worth-while . . . seated behind his office desk he directs all traffic between Lafayette students and their money (Did you see that new car he was driving around in recently?) . . . enjoys playing golf and telling anecdotes, as long as someone will listen to them . . . "Remember the difficulty you had in trying to go to a good college; think of the next fellow and try to get an unrestricted, democratic education for him."

Mr. Gordon:

All round good student . . . never flunked any subjects . . . favorites are math, economics, and history . . . was purely an accident that he became a teacher . . . didn't like zoology and didn't like the smell of formaldehyde so decided to forsake medicine for history and economics . . . what else could you do with it but teach it? . . . aspires to be able to play a good game of golf . . . at a very young age, Mr. Gordon wants to do as many young men want to do . . . travel and loaf . . . greatest ambition right now is to buy a car . . . here's news . . . Mr. Gordon is engaged . . . now that he's engaged he'll have something else on his mind beside history dates.

Mr. Michael Santora:

Went to New Utrecht H.S., C.C.N.Y., Columbia —and is still there . . . known to his friends as Jerry . . . married to a very lovely woman named Aquila (meaning eagle) . . . (she must have been hypnotized by his eyes) . . . hobbies include arts and crafts, dancing, especially waltz and tango . . . pet peeve is people who are insincere . . . has been teaching at Lafayette since its opening . . . was head of the G.O., but he left that post for the Army engineers . . . at present is faculty adviser to Arista (Sr. and Jr.) . . . is very fond of Lafayette and its students, and hopes that they continue to show their school spirit as in the past.

Miss Betsy Antin:

Lady with eternal smile, who wears Red Cross Ambulance Driver's Uniform and gives hard history tests (what a combination) . . . is known to all of us as the pride and joy of the Social Studies Department . . . as a little girl she always wanted to be a teacher and she was "awful" smart . . . partial to adolescents and doesn't like to scold . . . very sports-minded and enjoys almost all outdoor activities including horseback riding, skiing, golf, swimming, and truck driving . . . but from practical experience she wants us (we seniors)—we should learn well English and have better manners . . . "I like 'em" was what she said about us . . . (take it any way you want) . . . "In you lies the tremendous responsibility of retaining our peace—do a good job."

Mr. David Arbeit

Attended C.C.N.Y., Columbia, N.Y.U., and Brooklyn College . . . success in Economics in his own school career together with his fondness for children were the deciding factors in his choice of profession . . . his ambition is to write in the field of economics and history . . . weakest subject in high school was art and he worked hard to pass it . . . leaves this practical advice to seniors: "Go into a vocation or occupation that you like and make sure that it has some enterprise factor in it".

Mrs. Mary W. Wilson:

Quiet and reluctant to giving interesting interviews . . . but has a swell personality to top it off . . . doesn't want to be important or glamorous . . . just a plain ordinary teacher . . . is known by students as a calm, soft-spoken, lady who gives good marks and is a credit to the Speech Department. . . .

Mrs. Grace Warshauer:

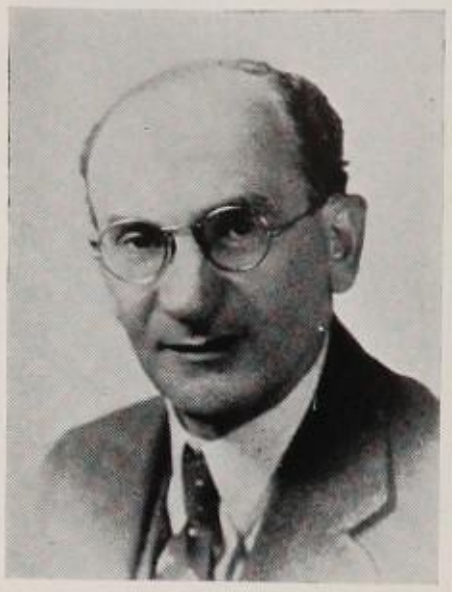
Was inspired by her own male English teacher to become one herself . . . liked English, physics, and P.T. . . . secret ambition is to be an athlete—to become a real outdoor type . . . went to Erasmus Hall High School and enjoyed the years there better than college years at Hunter . . . contends that she wanted to be a teacher at a very early age . . . loves the theatre, the ballet, and good movies and music . . . likes to dance, especially folk dances and devotes much time to her two children and her husband.

Mr. H. Ruchlis:

Mr. Ruchlis chose teaching because it appeared to be the best job at that time . . . his hobby is taking motion pictures, movies to you . . . he believes the pupils of Lafayette represent a good cross-section of people . . . pet peeve is people who are inconsiderate . . . he is looking forward to the time when the Seniors can give him advice . . . will that time ever come?!!

Mr. Abraham (for Lincoln) Harwich:

Head of Math Dept., College Adviser (it's about time you knew), Veterans' Adviser, and math teacher . . . all rolled up into one . . . originally was English teacher but when principal of school saw how he could mix up telephone numbers, he was put in math dept. . . . favorite sport is handball although he often interrupts classes to tell them why he should have pitched for the Cubs in the third series game instead of Derringer . . . known as a wit by mostly all the student (except those he failed) and regards this senior class including those members that took the three and one-half years course, as the best he has seen and hopes to see yet in Lafayette. (I didn't hold a gun in his back either) . . . "Always have a mind of your own to think your problems through . . . then debate it."



Wonder

By Blanche Levey

Gaze at the world, its endless might, its cities great, its evening light

Gaze and wonder—

Look at the sea, its roaring waves, its endless shore, its watery caves

Look and wonder—

Watch the sky, its broad expanse, its lovely hue, its stars that dance

Watch and wonder

Wonder how and wonder why

From what the sea, from where the sky

Wonder how it came to be

A world between a sky and sea.

Last Will and Testament

Being in full possession of our senses (???) we, as former inmates of Lafayette High School, after four years of involuntary servitude, spent in absorbing the wisdom proferred us by the Board of Education, in consuming innumerable sandwiches in the lunchroom, in serving periods of detention for not providing satisfactory excuses, are joyous on this, the twenty-sixth day of June, nineteen hundred and forty-six, to proclaim that these, the most valuable of our possession be left to our most cherished (???) ones:

To Dr. Oswald—We give our heartiest thanks for helping us faithfully during our stay.

To Mr. Grady—We leave a brown checked suit—if we can find one.

To Miss Hart—We leave our most sincere thanks for helping us . . . to leave, and a more co-operative Senior Class.

To Mr. Harwich—We leave one jeep, in which to ride back and forth from the Military Adviser's desk, to the College Adviser's desk, to the Math Office and to his Math Classes; also one chalk resistant suit.

To Miss Teijeiro—We leave an adding machine to count up to one hundred before losing her temper and the hope that all her future Spanish classes may be imported from Madrid.

To Mr. Broido—We leave blank pages and a typewriter with which he may write his version of "How to Win Friends and Influence People."

To Miss Della Chiesa—We leave a class of millionaires.

To Mr. Nazer—We leave the Math Department's discarded string compasses. Who knows, he may find the "Lost Chord" there.

To Mr. Jampel—We leave a pair of red flannel underwear for his "bubby".

To the Cafeteria Bus-Boy—We leave a pair of cymbals to replace the trays he has worn out by banging.

To Mr. Jacobson—We have nothing to leave—He took all we had.

To Mr. Pincus—We leave a patrol wagon with which he can "Round up de boys."

To Mr. Blumenthal—We leave a piggy bank . . . so he can pay off all the students who laugh at his corny jokes.

To the Cafeteria—We leave our names engraved on the tables for posterity.

To Mr. Herscher—We leave a fast get-away car and all the money he can carry.

To Sam and Andy (our faithful busmen)—We leave a pair of 1½" by 2" sardine cans as a memento of some tight squeezes.

To the future Lafayetteites—We leave our advice—"You'll be sorry".

To Next Term's Legend Staff—We leave one complimentary copy of this term's "Legend," which will probably haunt them for the rest of their lives.

To Lafayette—WE LEAVE.

Senior Daze!!

by Shelly Rabinowitz

I really can't believe it's true, but here it is at last,
The days we often dreamed of, in the years that have slipped past.
I remember how I envied with a heavy-hearted sigh,
The care-free, happy-go-luckies, whose Senior Pins caught my eye.

I watched them on the candy line, in front of all the rest,
They pushed me on the lunch line, and always got the best.
Those days when I was hoping to eat my lunch outside,
I sweated with the other kids; the time I had to bide!!

Each term I heard about the shows the Seniors said were grand,
Of course they were so special, no one else could understand.
Then there was a certain day, that Seniors only had,
We watched them run our classes with eyes so big and sad.

The time has come when I can see and understand their ways,
Because, my friends, as you can tell, I'm in my Senior Daze.

Not so slow but really sure
Finally became a senior.

VECCHIO, FLORENCE
206 Bay 29 Street
G.O. Rep., Bonds and Stamps Rep., Marquis Rep., Victory Rep., Mr. Arbeit's Squad.
Teachers fail whenever they try it.
We don't mean teaching it's keeping her quiet.

Best Wishes to a swell friend
Love Florence
Remember 39 B.A.?!

WALDMAN, RENEE
1536 West 10 Street
Major "L", Cheering Squad, Go Getters, G.O. Rep., Bond and Stamp Rep.
Cute and witty is this little gal,
Gay little charmer and a real pal.

to find
So here is one to keep in mind.

PAGANO, MICHAEL
2041—83 Street
One of the best.

10 Years From Now!

"Seniors Are My Favorite Subject . . . ", Teacher!!

By Selma Hutkin

Speaking to a few of the personalities in, and around Lafayette, I asked them teacher-to-student, "WHAT WOULD YOU MOST LIKE TO HAVE THE SENIORS REMEMBER TEN YEARS FROM NOW?" Contrary to popular belief, I was not greeted with any algebriac equations, French verbs, or even one measly French Revolution. But here, let them speak for themselves. . . .

I rounded up—

MR. EGGERS: (in the I.H.T. room)

"Ten years from today I would like to have the seniors remember and be guided by the examples of sportsmanship, self-sacrifice, and fair play that they saw during their years in Lafayette. I might also add that I hope they will remember the caricatures of me in those G.O. plays and bear in mind that they were . . . caricatures."

Popped the question to—

MAESTRO DePIETTO: (chewing a salmon sandwich in the Teacher's Cafeteria)

"I don't know what they'll remember but I (crunch, crunch) certainly enjoyed seeing them squirm when they had to get up and sing alone in my music class."

Found—

MR. BROIDO: (behind his desk in the G.O. Office)

"Judging by the memories displayed by our students, if any of them remembers ten years from now, what high school he attended, that would be an achievement. The one memory, however, that above all should remain, is one of pride in the part Lafayette played in winning the war."

Head of the Service Squad—

MR. PASTERNAK: (flashed my Senior Pin and got on the head of his late line)

"Lives there a man, at this late date, who still maintains, BETTER NEVER LATE!"

MRS. RUSSELL: (popular grade adviser and teacher)

"Ten years from now I'd like my students to remember to think for themselves, to weigh evidence before jumping to conclusions, to fight valiantly for what is right, to respect one another's beliefs—in short, to be good Americans and good human beings."

MR. GEORGE HAUPT:

"I hope they remember 'Haupt' is a sort of good guy and tried to treat his pupils fairly. If you seniors believe that I gave you a square deal, then I'm completely satisfied."
